Bristol Community College and Bridgewater State University in Attleboro are collaborating with the Attleboro Farmers Market to host a 4-week indoor market at the shared 11 Field Road, Attleboro location, this spring. The indoor market will take place on Saturdays, beginning May 4 through May 25, from 9 a.m. – 1 p.m. The events are free and open to the public.

“This is a very exciting community partnership,” said Heather Porreca, manager of the Attleboro Farmers Market. “We have been considering an indoor market, and partnering with Bristol and Bridgewater just makes sense, given their building set-up and location.”

The indoor market is set to include great food, live music, food trucks and artisan vendors. Both institutions will also have staff available at the events to provide information about their academic program offerings.

“We cannot wait for this to get started,” said Rodney Clark, dean of the Bristol Community College Attleboro campus. Cathleen DeSimone, director of Bridgewater State University - Attleboro added, “Hopefully this is just the start of a long and fruitful collaboration.”

Following the indoor market conclusion on Saturday, May 25, the Attleboro Farmers Market outdoor market will begin its summer season on Saturday, June 15, at O’Connell Field between Attleboro High School and Capron Park.
